Shirley Morgan, Gordon Wristen Exchange Vows At Sacred Heart

The Sacred Heart Church, Edmonton, was the scene of a beautiful wedding when Miss Shirley Elizabeth Morgan, daughter of Mrs. Kay Morgan of Edmonton, became the bride of Mr. Gordon O. Wristen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wristen of Viscount, Sask.

The marriage ceremony was performed before an altar banked with roses. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Routhier.

The bridesmaids, Miss Gloria Stratton, Miss Laura Ladouceur and Miss Patsy Bigger, wore dresses of organza over taffeta in shades of rose, blue and pink respectively. Each had white accessories.

The groom was attended by Mr. Andrew Wristen, Viscount, Sask. The ushers were Mr. Pat Trembley and Mr. James Wilkinson.

The bride's mother chose a dress of blue lace over taffeta, with pink rose corsage and pink accessories.

At a reception held in the Plamondon Community Hall, the guests were received by the bride's mother and aunt. The bride's table was attractively decorated with a three-tier wedding cake and bouquets of fresh garden flowers.

We Wuz Robbed

So headed the breezy tabloid New York Daily News last week when its Brooklyn printing plant was robbed by three gunmen of some $63,000. Author of the snappy line: Blunt-jawed Robert G. Shand, The News' managing editor. "We didn't want to be conventional," said Shand later, "and this was a natural." As an executive, Shand had to declare himself ineligible for The News' $50 prize for the week's best headline. And when the bandits were captured with most of the loot, The News played it straight. Shand said: "Once is enough."

The heavyweight champ, Floyd Patterson, takes on the light bag in a workout at Elgin, Ill., as he prepares to defend his crown against Sonny Liston in Chicago Sept. 25.

Jack Templeton Heads Committee To Work For Retention Of Market

A five-man committee has been set up by farm produce vendors at Edmonton Market Square to work for the retention of a public market in Edmonton.

City Commissioners say most of the 200 stalls at the market are vacant every day except Saturday and want to demolish the building to make way for Edmonton's new civic centre.

Sixty stall holders met last week and appointed a committee headed by Jack Templeton to ask City Council to maintain the existing building or provide other facilities before the old building is torn down. The market's customers will also be asked to sign a petition urging the city to maintain a market.

The market square has been operated by the city since 1912.

At that time, it was built and operated for two years before closing its doors to move to a new location. However, the farmers soon returned to their original location and in 1932 additions were made to the building.

Stalls are rented by the day at 50 cents per three-foot stall. Greenhouses pay $1 on week-days and from $1.75 to $2.50 on Saturday.

The city has, piece by piece, bought up all the land on which the market is situated.

Most of the people who discuss public problems know nothing about them.

Oil Man Takes Up League Challenge

Calgary oilman Carl O. Nickle has taken up a challenge by Roger Lebeuf of the Mineral Rights and Justice League that neither the oil industry nor the government has dared to attack the accuracy of his statements.

The League maintains Albertans are not getting a good deal out of the oil resources and is demanding a five per cent royalty for surface owners and more revenue for the government.

Mr. Nickle has offered to make reprints of his editorial in an oil magazine available free to members of the League.

Mr. Nickle said the claim for five per cent royalty for surface owners would be one of the crudest, rawest thefts in the history of Canada, which would cost Albertans hundreds of millions of dollars if it was ever granted.

Mr. Nickle said the deterioration in relations between the public, the government and the industry caused by Lebeuf's statements puts further stress upon the importance of good public relations and fair dealing, as far as oil companies are concerned. He adds that oil industry representatives should be ready to answer in simple terms the half-truths and errors of fact that Lebeuf is spreading.

No Shortage Of Teachers Noted In Primary Grades

An estimated 326,000 students began the 1962-63 school term in Alberta last Tuesday.

Deputy Education Minister Dr. W. H. Swift said the number is an increase of 16,000 over last year, or five per cent, which is normal for recent years.

Dr. Swift said the number of teachers is estimated to be 14,000, an increase of 1,000 over last year. The number of teachers has been rising faster than the number of pupils. Dr. Swift said this was due in large measure to an increase in special services for retarded and other children.

Dr. Swift said there is no visible shortage of teachers for elementary grades, but there still remains a shortage of fully qualified teachers in almost all high school departments. Dr. Swift added, however, the general situation is improving and the province is getting close to the point where it will have an adequate supply of qualified teachers.

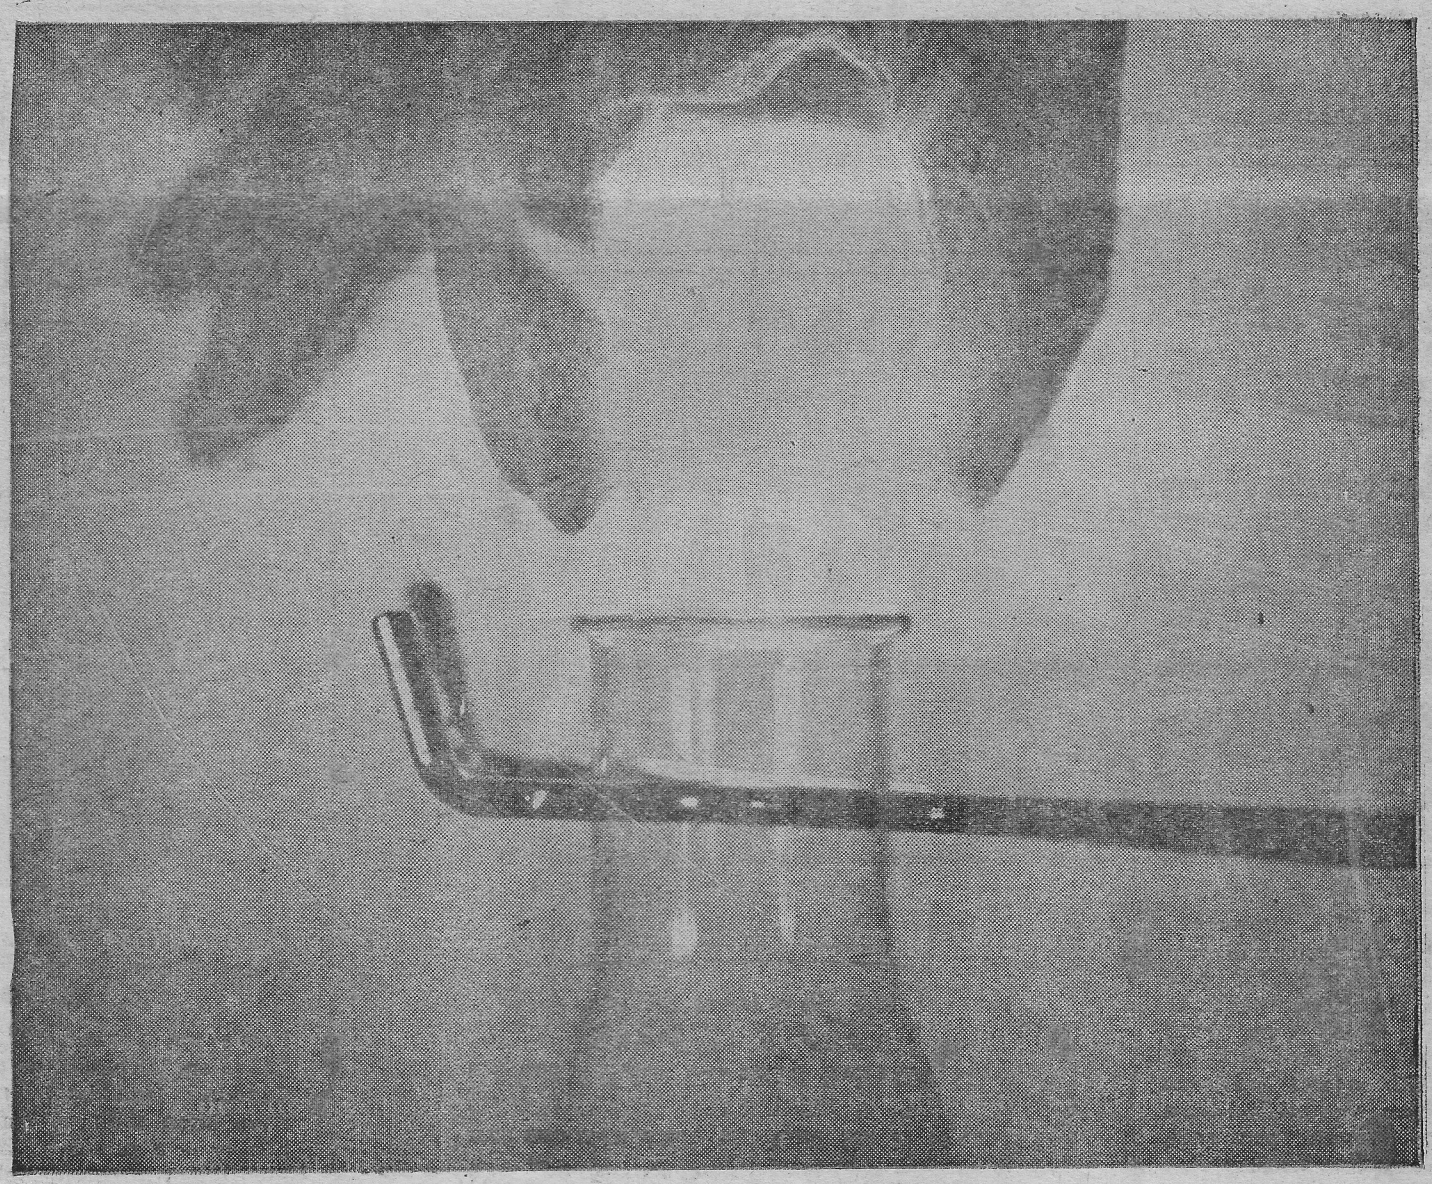
90% of all oil company product research in Canada is done by Imperial

At Imperial Oil's laboratories at Sarnia, Ontario, more than 200 scientists and technicians are working to improve present petroleum products—and to develop new ones. Their research covers many fields, from gasolines to household detergents. Another 130 scientists and technicians are working at Imperial's Calgary laboratories on ways to find and produce more Canadian crude oil and natural gas. Imperial does more research than all other oil companies in Canada combined.



Every barrel of crude oil contains some of the sun's heat. Imperial research works to unlock more of this energy. After five years' intensive research, Imperial found a chemical additive which makes more heating oil available from Canadian crude oil. One important result: less oil imported to heat Canadian homes.

HISTORY OF RED CROSS SERVICES

By ERIC ABELL

The greatest humanitarian movement the world has ever known was founded by a Swiss banker, Henri Dunant, who as a child was deeply concerned with the welfare of others. Dunant, in order to further his business ends, travelled to Northern Italy in 1859 seeking an interview with the French Emperor Napoleon III. Thus he became an eye witness to the horrors of the battle of Solferino, one of the fiercest battles of the century between the French and the Sardinians against the Austrians, which resulted in 40,000 dead and wounded.

Dunant, overwhelmed by the sight of so much tragic suffering, organized immediate help in the nearby town of Castiglione. Churches, schools, and even the market place were used as improvised hospitals. Straw was spread on the streets where the wounded lay. The townspeople used what little they had, tearing up their household linen for urgently needed bandages. Noble women, tourists, and peasants worked side by side helping friend and foe alike, learning from Dunant's example that in time of suffering humanity knows no barriers. They murmurred as they tended the wounded, "Tutti fratelli" (all men are brothers).

Known as the "man in white," Dunant worked night and day, himself, bringing hope to the wounded and comfort to the dying. Having organized local help, he went to the French army to beg for the release of the captured Austrian doctor, bringing back with him medical supplies and food.

Dunant's burning desire to relieve suffering in time of war inspired him to write "A memory of Solferino," in which his vision of the Red Cross took shape.

Church Notices

BOYLE — The Anglican church service was conducted last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock and will continue services at that time for the present.

Sunday School classes will start at 11 a.m. September 16 in the church. Teachers will be Mrs. May Read, Gail Hayton and Joan Alexander.

Parking Scramble

Civil servants throughout the province who drive to work must begin paying for parking stalls or scramble for the few free spots left for them.

A new government policy of charging civil servants -3 a month for parking places, -4 for those with electrical outlets, followed negotiations between the government and the civil service commission.

All government buildings and institutions will be affected by the new order. In some areas, officials expect there will be a shortage of available space, one space is reserved for public parking, and it is possible land will have to be bought. However, no land has been purchased so far.

Dr. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Last Dog-Team Era Explorer, Dies

The last and the most famous of Arctic explorers of the dog team era has, as the result of a stroke, died at Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire. Dr. Stefansson was consultant to the college on Arctic matters and there the Stefansson collection is maintained. An Albertan who has maintained correspondence with Dr. Stefansson is William H. Patterson, President of Trans-Western Oils, a Canadian independent which acquired the petroleum and natural gas rights on Borden, Mackenzie King and Shamrock Islands, which were discovered by Dr. Stefansson, thereby finally completing the map of North America.

The following notes were supplied to us by Mr. Patterson. On June 18, 1915, Stefansson's party discovered a land mass which was thought to be one island and for a time was known as Borden Island. When it was established that that land was comprised of two islands, the southern island was named Mackenzie King.

Stefansson claimed the newly discovered land for Canada by building a mound and placing in it the following records: "This land was first seen, so far as I know, by Storker Storkersen of the Canadian Arctic expedition, June 18, 1915."

"By authority especially vested in me for that purpose, I have today hoisted the flag of the empire and have taken possession of the land in the name of His Majesty King George V, on behalf of the Dominion of Canada. Signed Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Commander, Canadian Arctic Expedition. Witnesses: Storker Storkerson, Ole Anderson and Carl Thomsen. Party, dogs (13) and equipment all well. Shall proceed eastward along this coast some distance, should it prove extensive, and then south across or around Melville Island to the expedition headquarters near Cape Kellett, Banks Island. V. Stefansson."

Earlier, Stefansson had discovered Lougheed and Meighen Islands.

This last discovery of land in North America probably will see considerable activity in the future, as all of the petroleum and natural gas rights are held by strong companies. Trans-Western farmed out Borden and Mackenzie King Islands to Union Oil Company of Canada Limited and Emerald Isle to the team comprised of Shell, Tidewater, Skelly, Clark Oil and Refining and Canada Southern. Brock Island, which is part of that latest discovery and adjoins Mackenzie King Island to the west, is held by the Shell-Canada Southern group and Western Minerals.

Dr. Stefansson was very much aware of the petroleum potential of the islands. The oil authority, Dr. Wallace E. Pratt, writing in Harper's Magazine, stated that Dr. Stefansson had reported evidences of petroleum along with outcrops of lignite on Northern Melville Island and on Melville's south coast found bituminous shale, which he burnt for fuel. Dr. Pratt then goes on to write: "Geologically this region is certainly suitable for petroleum accumulation."

Dr. Stefansson not only predicted that oil would be found in the islands, but also that transport would be by submarines. He deals with this subject in his book "The Northward Course of Empire," published in New York by Harcourt, Brace and Company in 1922. Stefansson was a prolific author, one of the most noteworthy of his books being "The Friendly Arctic," published by Macmillan and Company in New York. Scientific reports prepared on information gathered by Stefansson's expedition became available from the Deputy Minister of Naval Service, Ottawa, the early volumes being ready in 1922. Branches of science covered by Stefansson's explorations and reports include anthropology, zoology, topography, meterology, boatny, biology, meteorology, magnetics, geology and oceanography.

Stefansson was born at Arnes, Manitoba, on November 3, 1879, of Icelandic stock. While Stefansson lived most of his life in the United States, his explorations were carried out on behalf of his native Canada and all the lands he discovered were claimed on behalf of Canada. His explorations of the polar region began in 1913 and his first vessel was the Karluk. While Stefansson, with a small party, was exploring on the polar ice, the ship which had been drifting with the Arctic current was lost with some members of the expedition at Wrangel Island, the former Canadian possession off the Siberian Coast. The survivors of the Wrangel Island party were rescued by the Seattle ship King and Winge. At that time there was practically no settlement of occidental Russians along that portion of the Siberian Coast, although more recently the area has been greatly developed.

Stefansson's death focuses worldwide attention on this great man. This is not the first time, however, that he has made news throughout the world. It is recalled that on two occasions he was given up for dead by all the experts who believed he could not have so long survived during long absences in the Arctic Islands, and on one occasion far out on the ice of the polar seas. The news was sensational when Stefansson and his parties returned in good health after living off the land of the Arctic Islands for years and even off the ice of the Arctic Ocean for several months at a time.

After Captain George H. Wilkins, the Australian explorer, second in command of the Stefansson expedition, left the expedition in 1916 upon his discovery that a war was on, his place was taken by Storker Storkersen. Storkersen contributed "Living Off The Ice" to Macleans Magazine in 1920. Stefansson had been taken down with typhoid at the Herschel Island settlement off the Yukon Arctic coast. Storkersen took charge of the two men expedition far out over the ice of the Beaufort Sea and in his report in part wrote: "We have confirmed what the whole Stefansson expedition has proved that the Arctic Sea is not as inhospitable as people think. My party of five men were able to live for eight months safely and comportably on it and never went without a meal. So far as we could judge, we could have lived on the ice eight years as easily as eight months." Stefansson and Storkersen on one of their trips of several months duration out over the ice lived entirely on seal meat and found it a completely adequate diet.

Stefansson was a great advocate of development of Canada's northern frontier. He believed that the meat industry based on the caribou, on its close cousin the reindeer, as well as on the polar oxen, could supply the beef hungry world with large supplies of food, wool, as well as meat, and for this and several other reasons (I) would suppose that the ovibos (polar oxen) and not the reindeer will essentially be the chief domestic animal of the northern half of Canada and the northern third of Asia, and he continues: "We have a body of information which should destroy much of the superstition about the vegetation and climate of the north and the suitability of the Arctic and sub-Arctic lands for the production of meat on a commercial scale whether they are reindeer, polar cattle (polar oxen) or some other suitable animal. Stefansson pointed out that polar cattle, ovibos or polar oxen) are fatter in January than in July as the grass in the shallow snow fall is available all winter and is adequately nourishing." He also wrote that "reindeer can convert into delicious meat the billions of tons of vegetation that go to waste yearly on the northern prairies."

Measures Instituted To Expedite Trials

New measures are being instituted at Edmonton's two city police courts to expedite the handling of trials.

The clerk of the courts, L. W. McCray said some city police impaired driving trials are being waived to Magistrate H. J. Wilson's RCMP court which is usually not as busy as the city courts.

Another arrangement will enable a trial to be waived from one city police court to another during the same day. For example, when Magistrate S. V. Legg has extra time available because an accused has decided at the last minute to plead guilty instead of going to trial, Magistrate F. W. Barclay in the adjoining courtroom may waive a trial to him, if all concerned are ready to proceed.

Mr. McCray said the steps are being taken get cases to trial at the earliest possible time and to prevent a backlog of cases from being built up.

After spending the summer holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lund, Raymond Hagen returned to Athabasca to attend school.

Garry Hayton and Alvin Jarhel of Edmonton were recent weekend visitors.

CANNING TIPS

FLOATING FRUIT:
Condition

B. McCutcheon

Fruit is at top in a mass. Sometimes is all broken, probably both overcooked and too ripe. Sometimes the fruit is in good pieces but still floating. It's safe to use, but not sometimes attractive.

Prevention

1. Use lighter syrup and just ripe fruit.
2. Allow sugar to stand on fruit before canning (strawberries particularly).
3. Precook firm fruits.

JELLYING FRUIT:
Condition

Juice thickened and like a soft jelly. Underripe fruit was canned or pecticenzymes were not destroped.

Prevention

Use ripened fruit. Process the correct length of time.

FADED FRUIT:
Condition

Sometimes poor preparation makes food lose color. Some varieties lose color more than others. Some fade when stored in a light place.
Safe but not attractive.

Prevention

1. Prevent injury to berries, causing escape of juice.
2. Use sanitary R-enamel cans and lacquered lids on jar for red colored berries.
3. Store in a cool and dark place.

MOULDY FRUIT:
Condition

Usually the result of poor seals, Open kettle method of processing may result in lack of sufficient sterilization; this may prevent good seals and also may not kill mold already on product. Fruits showing any quantity of mold should be thrown out. Molds may neutralize acid and permit botulinus bacteria to grow.

Prevention

Good seals will prevent most mold. Sterilization of product and equipment in any method of canning will help. Use high enough temperature in processing a few minutes at 185 degrees F., will kill molds.

VEGETABLES

WHITE SEDIMENT IN VEGETABLES:
Condition

White particles settling in bottom of containers. Does not turn liquid cloudy.

Prevention

Use soft water.

WHITE SEDIMENT IN MATURE BEANS AND PEAS:
Condition

Over mature vegetables. Sometimes starch cooks out and gives liquid a white look.
Usable but lower quality.

Prevention

Use young tender vegetables. Can immediately after gathering. Use steady pressure.

FOGGY LIQUID:
Condition

May be flat sour spoilage. Food has acid taste.
Undesirable to eat.

Prevention

Handle products rapidly and carefully. Store in cool place.

BROWNED CORN:
Condition

Overcooking, canning corn, of poor stage or maturity, or causing too much corn and not enough water in jar.

Prevention

Choose fresh corn of right maturity. Process as directed. Use recommended amount of water in corn to give loose pack,
